
Construction of constant mean curvature surfaces from minimal surfaces

MARTIN TRAIZET

Many families of constant mean curvature (CMC) surfaces converge, after suitable blow-up, to a minimal surface. The simplest example is the Delaunay family which converges to a catenoid. I will explain how the process can be reversed, using the DPW method, to construct CMC surfaces from minimal surfaces.

Université de Tours, France